Home-Grown Arts is the second in a series of zines that look at the current higher education system in the UK. Inspired by the news of suspensions to courses at Wolverhampton School of Art and Screen School; Home-Grown Arts presents research into the disparity in arts funding outside of London. Whilst sharing facts and figures about student loans, regional imbalance, and government schemes, Home-Grown Arts gives readers a glimpse into life as an artist and student in the Midlands.

The final pages of the zine also offer advice for new students, parents, carers, teachers, educators, and artists.
