Meng Li, MA Art and Design: Interdisciplinary practices
Excessive Defence

Have you ever been bothered by allergies?
This design aims at social welfare art and explains the process of allergy generation through installations and videos. With the fun and interactive art, the author hopes to make the audience aware of allergies, to be able to be alert and prevent them in their lives, to be able to communicate effectively with their doctors when they encounter related symptoms, and ultimately to increase the safety and satisfaction of the public in their lives.

The piece is triggered by participants dropping an allergen dish into the immune cell model, which changes its surface to reveal some tips. This is accompanied by a video presentation by a doctor who leads the participants through the interactive process.
