Ding Rong MA Art and Design: Interdisciplinary Practices
Walking with kinetic jewellery

At present, most of the jewelry are mainly static decorations, and only some jewellery are designed with organs that can be manually changed. This project is about to explore a more novel jewelry wearing experience. People often chat while walking, and the early warning mechanism of the human brain is activated during the walking process, making it easier to focus on and think about things, and more cautious than usual. At the same time, in psychology, walking therapy is also a psychological intervention method that has been generally proven to have a positive impact. Bring a fun jewelry that moves with you and experience the charm of kinetic jewelry .
